EXTINCT HOUSES.

What has become of the children of all the extinct royal houses? If we suppose two children to every man, we get a geometrical progression in the number of their descendants. Taking the Carolingian dynasty, for example, the last two sons found an asylum in Germany. Each of these may have been the father of thirty generations; and there might be now, had not wars and famine intervened, upwards of a thousand millions—as any one may calculate—of lineal descendants of the last Carolingian king. In other words, under peaceful conditions, it would take a single pair only thirty-one generations, or less than a thousand years, to people the whole world as it is now peopled. Of course all these calculations are upset by war, famine, pestilence, and ignorance of hygiene. Still, with all deductions, is it not obvious that the blood of any given man must, after many generations, be flowing in the veins of many people? Another way to look at it is Southey's. He said, humorously, that since every man has two progenitors, eight atav, sixteen above, and so forth, he himself must have had, in the reign of King John, all England for his ancestors. As a matter of fact, from Southey to King John there were 29 generations, which give a million as the number of his ancestors at the time, or about a third of the whole population of King John's England. It is, however, quite obvious that, while the blood of the two Carolingian princes may possibly be found in every German soldier now before Paris, it takes an immense number of ancestors to make one man, after twenty generations or so. And it is a consolatory reflection to those who unfortunately have forgotten their own grandfathers, that, among all the countless ancestors, some, at least, must have been kings. How pleasant, after spending a lifetime in searching among mute, inglorious village registers, to find yourself descended from a brother of Shakespeare, or a cousin from Milton, or one of the many children, say, of Charles II! And, quoting your own case, how it would fortify your belief in the hereditary nature of genius!—[From Harper's.]

An article which recently appeared in the New York Evening Post gives some curious facts in regard to the income tax. Among other things it is shown that A. T. Stewart paid more than either one of the twenty-seven States, including territories, more than Arizona, Colorado, Dakota, Florida, Washington, New Mexico, Utah, Idaho and Montana combined, more than either of the districts in Massachusetts, and $53,000 more than the ninth and tenth districts paid. Mr. W. B. Astor paid more than the whole State of Vermont, and probably did not pay for more than he had either.

In speaking of the next Presidency, the New York Tribune says: "As yet no one suggests any other Republican candidate than Gen. Grant, and he is likely to be again nominated, as he was in '68, without a dissenting voice. Yet there are grave, though not insuperable objections to the re-election of a President while in office, and we cannot doubt that public opinion will ultimately settle into a conviction that the One-Term principle is, as a general rule, well grounded. For 1872, however, the renomination of General Grant would seem a foregone conclusion."

RECIPES.—To make good, sharp pickles, whittle off both ends of them to a point. Toss freshen a salt mackerel, tow him one Summer behind a stembote. Toss get rid of cockroaches, sell your house and lot and flee to the mountains.—[Josh Billings.]

The South African brilliants are scientifically pronounced to be not genuine. A London jeweler has found them to be lumps of translucent quartz, and thereby won the eternal hatred of such as, making haste to be rich, were gathering bushels of them.

A business man may get along without advertising; so may a wagon go without greasing; but it is hard.

Matrimony and divorce are woman's rites.

TAKE WARNING!

THE V. & T. R. CO. ARE ANXIOUS TO take due precaution against accidents and loss of life resulting from the running of their trains; and they take this method of warning parents and guardians against the dangers attending the too common practice of children playing about their cars and locomotives. Those having in charge the business of the Company find it impossible to persuade boys, who frequent the termini and stopping places of the road from climbing upon the cars and engines; and they will feel themselves obliged to resort to more decided measures if these annoyances are continued. Recent accidents, which are wholly attributable to the carelessness of persons in jumping on and off the cars when in motion, should be warning enough in themselves.
